

Sometimes people with cancer report that they feel isolated and alone even among a group of people who care about them. You may be feeling separated from the usual work or social activities because your